It is like that all over the investment community these days. Still spooked by the collapse in October of prices on the New York Stock Exchange and confused by confleting economic data that raise fears of higher inflation in the United States, institutional investors, until recently the most important players in the market, are keeping to the sidelines.

As a result, stock trading has taken on a much different character, dominated by program trading, takeover speculation and other short-term strategies.

"No one wants to do anything." said Robert J. Chamine, managing director of equity trading at Werth-eim, Schroder Inc. "I don't ever

Even this week's relatively low daily volume of roughly 150 million shares is inflated, traders say. Excluding transactions involving program trading, takeover stocks and dividend-capture strategies where investors buy shares of highyielding stocks shortly before the companies declare dividends - the "real" volume is estimated at as low as 60 million shares on some days. Unemployment Falls to 5.4%, A 14-Year Low

Commicd by Our Staff From Disputches WASHINGTON - The U.S. civilian unemployment rate fell to 5.4 percent in April, the lowest figure since 1974, as demand for U.S. exports continued to increase factory hiring, the Labor Department said

It was the third consecutive monthly drop for the unemploy-ment rate, which was 5.6 percent in

Growth in new factory jobs, which had been sluggish the previous three months after rising dramatically in 1987, accounted for more than a quarter of the 174,000 increase in nonfarm payrolls in Pacing the increase were exportrelated industries, such as machinery and fabricated metal products. But production jobs in the U.S. automobile industry also climbed by 10,000, reversing wide layoffs in January and February.

The rise in nonfarm payrolls was slightly below the 250,000 that financial markets had expected, and was less than the revised 296,000 climb in March. The department originally reported a rise of 262,000 Investors in U.S. stocks and

GDANSK, Poland - Poland's Roman Catholic Church condemned the forceful government suppression of a steelworkers' strike and said a similar move had been decided against the striking

Lenin shipyard here.
A statement issued Friday by the secretariat of the Polish episcopate said the bishops "express deep sorrow that an attempt of dialogue and social conciliation" started by the church Wednesday with the government's consent "did not bring about the expected results."

The attack by security forces on the Lenin steel mill in Nowa Huta near Krakow, which occurred as church-appointed delegates were mediating, "does not serve the welfare of society or of the country." the statement said.

It added: "In relation to the Le-nin shipyard, a decision for the strike's liquidation was also taken."

The protest by the church came as militarized riot policemen continued to besiege the Lenin ship-yard in Gdansk, occupied by the leader of the Solidarity trade union. Lech Walesa, and about 800 to 1,000 workers demanding the legalborn there in 1980. For the second consecutive day, the police halted deliveries of food and medicine to the yard and sealed off a wide area around it in central Gdansk.

The Latest Word in Telecommunication: 'Fax It'

By Calvin Sims New York Times Service

NOUMEA, New Caledonia --Indigenous Kanaks warned Friday that the deaths of 19 Kanak rebels during a battle to rescue a group of French hostages would not deter their fight against French rule in the South Pacific territory.

About 500 Kanaks gathered in a poor suburb outside Noumea to express solidarity with the rebels, who were killed when French commandos stormed a cave on the island of Ouvéa to free 23 law officers from two weeks of captivity.

A wounded leader of the kidnappers died during the night. Fifteen bodies were found immediately after the battle.

Organizers of the protest meeting called for another rally on Friday and warned that they might march into Noumea "to protest against France's colonial war."

"The French government has taken the initiative," Raphael Mapou, a separatist, told reporters at the front's headquarters. "Nineteen deaths will not slow us down."

A separatist trade union said it was appealing to its 2,000 members, mainly dockers and health and air transport workers, to stage a 24-hour strike on Friday.

U.S. Appeals To Russia on Cambodia

By Don Oberdorfer

Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — The United States has appealed to the Soviet Union to take a strong hand in Leaking a diplomatic impasse blocking negotiations aimed at settling the war in Cambodia, according to State Department officials.

The U.S. appeal was made in Paris early last week by Gaston Sigur, the assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, to his Soviet counterpart. lgor A. Rogachev, a deputy foreign minister, the U.S. officials said.

They quoted Mr. Sigur as having said that only a new move by Vietnam, a Soviet ally, could renew the

New Questions Raised on Brawley's Story of Rape

By Howard Kurtz

Washington Past Service
NEW YORK — Two news accounts have raised more questions about the account by Tawana Brawley, a black teenager, of her alleged abduction and rape by six white captors during four days last November.

However, one of Miss Brawley's lawyers on Thursday denounced the news accounts as "journalistic rape."

National attention focused on Miss Brawley after she was found on Nov. 28 covered with dog excrement and racial slurs scrawled on her body. She and her lawyers have refused for three months to cooperate with State Attorney Robert Abrams, the special prosecutor in the case. The case has become a symbol of racial tensions and divisions in the United States. Two unidentified witnesses told WCBS-TV that they saw the Dutchess County teen-ager at a birthday party in upstate Newburgh during the four-day period when she says she was kidnapped and sexually assaulted by six white men. Miss Brawley's lawyers denied the account.

The other story, in the New York Daily News, said that Miss Brawley, 16, had run away from home twice in the two years before her alleged abduction and that both episodes ended with beatings from her mother, Glenda Brawley. The Brawley lawyers did not challenge the accuracy of that story.

Investigators are known to be examining the earlier runaway episodes because they could provide a rationale for Miss Brawley to have concocted a tale of abduction. According to this theory, she may have feared being beaten by her mother or stepfather, who has a violent past, after running away in November.

The Daily News has reported previously that a classmate of Miss Brawley made up a strikingly similar tale of sexual abduction

A spokesman for Mr. Abrams said investigators are examining reports that Miss Brawley was seen at the birthday party.

At a packed news conference Thursday, Miss Brawley's attorneys, Alton H. Maddox Jr. and C. Vernon Mason, and the Reverend Al Sharpton refused to discuss why they have urged her not to testify before a Dutchess County grand jury. Instead, they assailed the news media, Mr. Abrams, Governor Mario M. Cuomo and

Mr. Sharpton accused WCBS of having "prostituted itself" by paying two teen-agers to say they saw Miss Brawley at a birthday party Nov. 27. He said the party was held on a different night, that she was not there and that the witnesses did not know her.

Mr. Sharpton introduced Gregory Fleming Sr., who said his son, 17, was one of those interviewed by Channel 2. He said by a group of white men in November 1986 his son and a friend "made it up" and that and later recanted when pressed by police. it was "a big joke to them." Mr. Fleming said they told him the station paid them between $10 and $100.

Mike Taibbi, a WCBS reporter, denied this, saying he had merely bought them a meal at a local Burger King. "We offered no money," he said. "We said we didn't pay for stories." Mr. Mason accused "the establishment media" of "journalistic rape," adding: "I would think there would be some ethical standards, even in racist journalism." In the Daily News story, an 18-year-old high school senior said Miss Brawley slept at his house one night in 1985, after they had been dating for several months. Lana Stansberry. 16, told the News that she and Miss Brawley cut school in April 1986, drank beer and smoked marijuana and spent the night at two young men's homes. Mr. Sharpton said that to say she ran away two years ago "is not to lay a basis of saying she was making up something now."

N.Y. Graffiti Plague

Said to Be Declining Two decades after graffiti be-came epidemic in New York, creating a pervasive sense that the city was out of control, the plague has quietly begun to re-cede. So say city officials, leaders of civic groups and even many graffiti writers, according to The New York Times.
Police are more vigilant against scrawlers. Far greater fiti quickly to deny vandals pleasure in seeing their work. Graffiti gangs show a growing tendency to use guns in lighting over their "turf," scaring many scrawlers away. Art courses are sponsored to provide vandals with more constructive pursuits. The sale of spray-paint cans is restricted for minors, and a new city ordinance requires store owners to keep the cans locked up.

Early in this decade, 95 percent of New York's 5,956 subway cars were largely covered with graffiti; now 86 percent are graffiti-free. The amount of Agrafiiti vandalism on public shuildings is down by half in the past year alone, according to a spokesman for the General Services Department.

The priest's proponents argue that, on the contrary, he protected them against exploitation by Spanish soldiers.

Legislation for new U.S. coins has been endorsed by 61 of the 100 senators and 85 of the 435 members of the House of Representatives. It calls for new designs on the reverses of the five coins in mass circulation. Their obverses would portray the same five presidents, but new likenesses would "be considered." The Lincoln cent has been a fixture for nearly 80 years, longer than any other coin in American history. Even its "new" reverse, portraying the Lincoln memorial, has been in use since 1959. The Price France Paid

Americans need to be mindful of their en a common front against terrorism and own sins before lecturing anybody on the could encourage more hostage-taking and subject of ransoming hostages. That said, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac appears to have paid a humiliatingly high price to free the last three French captives in Lebanon. France is said to have offered a final $330 million repayment to settle a $1 billion loan made by Iran in the days of the shah, and agreed to normalize relations with Tehran.

For its part, Iran has leaned on allies in Lebanon to free the three hostages — just days before a presidential vote in which Mr. Chirac is trailing the Socialist incumbent. François Mitterrand. To all appearances, it is a political coup for Mr. Chirac, who announced the news at an election rally in Strasbourg, Mr. Mitterrand can hardly do anything but welcome the liberation of two diplomats and a journalist, as he has done.

With equally suspicious timing, French commandos on Thursday freed 23 hostages held by Melanesian separatists in New Caledonia. Was this show of force in the South Pacific territory, at the cost of 21 lives, meant to offset the appearance of cravenness in dealing with Iran?

In outmaneuvering his rival, Mr. Chirac has paid dearly. His dealings with Iran weak-further manipulation of Western elections.

Mr. Chirac's defenders reply that France pleaded the case for freeing more than 20 other foreigners still held captive, and will argue that case more strongly once it has an ambassador in Tehran. Against this is the disquieting fact that the chief French negotiator was the same interior minister, Charles Pasqua, who not long ago violated France's traditions of asylum by expelling Iranian exiles as a sop to Tehran.

It remains to be seen whether French citizens will truly appland this transaction. Mr. Chirac's party, after all, was founded by larger-than-life general who imagined France as the fairy-story princess with an exalted destiny: "Instinctively I have the feeling that Providence has created her either for complete successes or exemplary misfortunes ... Our country, as it is, surrounded by the others, as they are, must aim high and hold itself straight, on pain of mortal danger. In short, to my mind, France cannot be

Jaruzelski Learns Slowly

Poland has taken against the strike movement proves its own bankruptcy. In 1981 its answer to Solidarity was force - the nationwide imposition of martial law by the army. In 1988, its answer to Solidarity is force — the invasion of factories and intimidation of striking workers by the police. The regime's efforts in the interim to win popular confidence appear to have come to naught. A Communist state ostensibly organized in the name of the working class again is using police-state methods to roll over the demands of the working class. The few people participating in this strike movement did so in a modest and restrained way. They were peaceful. They readily accepted the mediation mission organized by the Roman Catholic Church. Their goal was the reasonable one of being accepted as a partner in preparing the reforms, involving sacrifices in the standard of living, that Poland desperately needs.

The action the Jaruzelski government in Lech Walesa, leader of the independent toland has taken against the strike move-trade union Solidarity, was advising strikers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk to ask for Solidarity to be legalized, just at their own plant in the beginning. But the government attacked the strikers, first politically and then with the police.

For Poland, the Soviet Union and any like country attempting to modernize, there are heavy political risks. It cannot be otherwise. But it is the Communist Party's monopoly of power that has created the prevailing stalemate, and it is only by the sharing of power in some form of pluralism that the people's requisite work, cooperation and loyalty can be mobilized, and that the vital support of the West can be gained The would-be reformer, General Wojciech Jaruzelski, has had nearly a decade in power to learn this elementary lesson. The evidence of his truncheon-swinging police is that he has not learned it.

Welcome the Refugees

Two faces of U.S. immigration policy: On Wednesday, the deadline passed for undocumented aliens who have lived in the country since 1982 to apply for amnesty under the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act. But as this warmhearted program was winding up, the administration was in court pursuing narrow-minded ef-forts to force Salvadorans seeking political asylum in the United States to leave.

A federal judge in California has now rebuffed these efforts, and rightly so. The judge understood that the Salvadorans deserve the same generosity expressed by the amnesty program. It is past time for the Reagan administration to understand this.

U.S. laws have tried to strike the proper balance between welcoming immigrants who face persecution in their homeland and resisting those who merely seek a better standard of living. Making such distinctions is the duty of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. But too often, its determinations are clouded by foreign policy judg-ments, especially in the case of illegal aliens from El Salvador. As long as the Reagan administration supported the political regime there, it insisted that Salvadorans who came to America were fleeing poverty, not persecution. It consistently granted political asylum to less than 5 percent. In 1982, Salvadorans in the United States filed a lawsuit claiming discrimination. Federal District Judge David Kenyon has now ruled in their favor. He cited evidence of political oppression and human rights abuses m El Salvador, and he found that the INS routinely refused to notify Salvadorans of their right to apply for political asylum, or otherwise discouraged them from seeking it.

Judge Kenyon found that Salvadorans were regularly coerced into signing voluntary departure forms, thus short-circuiting the deportation hearing process in which political asylum claims might be raised. And INS agents denied the Salvadorans access to lawyers, telephones, even writing materials.

The United States knows how to be generous in its treatment of illegal aliens, as the extraordinary amnesty program demonstrates. Judge Kenyon's ruling affirms that Salvadorans who seek political refuge merit that same welcoming spirit.

Reagan Sweet, Reagan Sour

There probably are as many White House-watchers in Moscow as there are Kremlin-watchers in Washington. But people in that line of work in Moscow are said to have an easier time of it because America is such an open society. Try telling that to the analyst who perhaps even now is trying to explain to the boss what President Reagan really has on his mind.

Two weeks ago Mr. Reagan said some harsh things about the Soviets. A country that "continues to suppress free expression, religious worship and the right to travel," he said, cannot have normal relations with the United States any more than can a Soviet Union "that is always trying to push its way into other countries.

Then on Wednesday, Mr. Reagan "applauded" the changes in Soviet society that have taken place under Mikhail Gorbachev. He said the Kremlin is releasing more political prisoners and putting fewer dissidents in mental hospitals. "We recognize that changes occur slowly," he said, "but it is better than no change at all." He even engaged in some glasnost of his own, acknowledging that America must do more to help the homeless, banish racial discrimination and create jobs for the unemployed. [One U.S. official] denied that the soft tone was meant to be an olive branch. Another said that it was.

At the risk of making things too easy for Moscow's wretched White House-watchers, we have a suggestion: The president should treat the Soviets like grown-ups who are trying to correct one of history's most massive mistakes. He can be firm on matters like human rights and the Third World without going to excesses of praise or blame. In fact, if he were to do that the firmness would stand out more sharply and not the excesses.

France: First the Joy

First comes the joy. Pure joy that, after three years of blackmail and horror, three French hostages [Marcel Fontaine, Marcel Carton and Jean-Paul Kauffmann] are finally free. Joy for them, their families and friends, for all those who saw a three-year nightmare come to an end. Joy, but sadness too, as their release has confirmed the death of [their fellow captive] Michel Seurat. Tomorrow will come the questions. They are numerous and terrible. We know what the Iranians were demanding as the price of normalizing" their relations with France - weapons, political concessions, the re-lease of prisoners held in France. We don't yet know what they obtained.

[Two years ago], Jacques Chirac promised to free our hostages in Lebanon. Mission accomplished. Yet already, some are saying that the price paid, just days before the election, had to have been too high.

But set aside politics for now — and witness the joy of those who have returned to freedom, the happiness of their families.

Here's How Moscow Can Prove Its Sincerity

WASHINGTON — How sincere is the Soviet Union about devising a new military doctrine that emphasizes defense and a "reasonable sufficiency" of forces? After my recent meeting with Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov, I came away convinced that Soviet officials are at least talking seriously about such a change. Nevertheless, there remains a wide gap between reality and rhetoric. Moscow still seems to take a very expansive view of military "sufficiency" and shows no inclination to reduce its forces except in mutual arms agreements. Before the United States could begin to consider relaxing its defense posture, there would have to be hard evidence of a change in the offensive character of Soviet forces and a willingness to make unilateral reductions to bring those forces into parity with the West's.

This is not to say that nothing was accomplished. Simply holding such a meeting — the first between the chief American and Soviet military officials since World War II -- set an important precedent and helped us each better understand the other's point of view. But the talks produced no concrete proof of any change in doctrine. Yet, without promising any major adjustments in Soviet forces and military spending in the near future, General Yazov clearly suggested that a defensive doctrine was being implemented and that changes in forces would become evident. I pointed out to General Yazov that Soviet military spending, according to our estimates, is still growing by about 3 percent a year, adjusted for inflation, while the U.S. defense budget has declined by 11 percent in real terms since 1984. I added that the assessment of a former defense By Frank C. Carlucci secretary, Harold Brown, still seemed to hold true: When we build, the Soviet Union builds; when we stop, the Soviet Union continues to build. If Moscow truly wants to move to a defensive posture, it could take several steps without risking its own security, including the following:

• Eliminating the Warsaw Pact's numerical superiority over the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in tanks, artillery and other offensive arms. The Soviet bloc has an especially threatening advantage in forces that could be used to invade, seize and hold territory in Western Europe. Arms inventories far exceed legitimate defense needs. Withdrawing airborne and airmobile forces from Europe and dramatically reducing the relatively large numbers of airborne forces main-tained in the Soviet Union.

Unilateral arms cuts would help confirm the talk of a more defense-minded Soviet military.

Airborne and airmobile forces reflect the of-fensive character of Soviet military power. In East Germany alone, the Soviet Union has nearly enough units to organize an entire airborne division. Such a division could be reinforced rapidly by numerous similar brigades and battalions stationed elsewhere in Eastern Europe and in the Soviet Union, or be supported by the seven other fully manned Soviet airborne divisions.

 Reducing other offense-oriented capabilities, such as large and growing stockpiles of military materiel in forward areas, bridge-building equipment and engineering units in Eastern Europe and the continuing upgrading of army reserve divisions to active status in the Warsaw Pact. All this strengthens Moscow's ability to invade.

 Joining America in reducing long-range nuclear forces through a strategic arms reduction treaty and in increasing the role of effective strate-gic defenses against ballistic missile attack. The Soviet Union continues to maintain large numbers of silo-based, first-strike intercontinental ballistic missiles. Soviet willingness to join us in shifting away from offensive nuclear forces, and toward a greater reliance on strategic defense, would contribute to mutual security and to a safer world in general.

The United States remains eager to see any signs of actions like these that would prove that Soviet doctrine has changed. Meanwhile, we consider the dialogue on unlitary affairs to be useful, and we intend to continue it.

The Soviet Union has known its share of wartime suffering, and no one begrudges it a military that maintains Soviet national security. But Moscow can ensure its security without the aggressive doctrine and offensive posture it now maintains. So far, we have heard only Soviet claims about a shift in doctrine. We still await hard evidence.

A Close Brush With Super-OPEC Means Trouble Ahead

WASHINGTON — As the West W looks on benignly, the oil shock of the 1990s is being prepared. The United States refuses to do the one thing that would prevent it. And at least one enterprising American politi-cian is doing his bit to accelerate it. The foundation for the new shock is super-OPEC, a joining of the Orga-nization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and seven non-OPEC independent producers to retake control of the world oil market. Last week, super-OPEC was very nearly born. Only a last-minute maneuver by Saudi Arabia forestalled it.

The non-OPEC seven — Angola, China, Colombia, Egypt, Malaysia, Mexico and Oman — control 18 per-cent of non-Soviet bloc oil production. OPEC controls 38 percent. Last week in Vienna, the two groups met for the first time and nearly agreed to raise oil prices by jointly cutting production.

The non-OPEC producers offered to cut exports by 5 percent (183,000 barrels a day) if OPEC made cuts of the same proportion. OPEC balked. A majority, led by cash-poor Algeria and Iran, offered a (proportionately) smaller cut of 300,000 barrels a day. Cash-rich Saudi Arabia refused. It held out for an equal, barrel-for-barrel OPEC cut (that is, 183,000).

Over a disagreement of about 100,000 barrels a day (one-fourth of 1 percent of free world production), the super-OPEC idea collapsed.

For now. The Saudi move looks tactical and temporary. First of all, it was meant to stymic Iran, with which Saudi Arabia had just broken diplomatic relations. Iran is desperate for cash to finance its war against Iraq. It needs higher oil prices. Saudi Arabia, with its huge reserves, does not. Its to conserve market share.

Which is the other reason the Saudis balked. The non-OPEC producers have been stealing OPEC market share for seven years. In 1981, the Saudis were producing 10 million barrels a day. They are now down to 4 million. As OPEC has cut production to prop up prices, the slack has been taken up by non-OPEC countries pumping at peak capacity.

Chances are that the Saudis are bluffing or at least holding out for a better offer. Super-OPEC is simply too good an idea for oil producers. The very anticipation of Vienna was enough to raise oil prices by about $3 a barrel (20 percent) in the two months preceding the meeting. Most of the world's oil exporters want to move toward a global cartel.

How global? Among the observers also to press for "price stability." at Vienna, watching and encouraging the price fixing, were the oil powers Norway and Texas. Texas was represented by Kent Hance, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates Texas oil production and in the good old days (pre-OPEC) used to fix world oil prices. Mr. Hance, co-chair of George Bush's campaign steering committee in Texas, is an advocate of oil price stability. When oil prices shot from $2 to $34 per barrel between 1972 and 1982, Texas was not heard advocating price stability. Now that prices have collapsed, "stability" has become an ideal. Mr. Hance is even prepared to cut Texas production to achieve it.

He wants to prop up oil prices to save Texas's devastated economy. Two years ago, when the price of oil fell through $10 a barrel, Vice PresiSaving Texas may be a good idea, but Mr. Hance and his candidate have been going about it in the worst possible way. The worst possible way s to raise the price of oil everywhere If the world price is pushed to, say, $20 from $15 a barrel, American consumers have to pay the extra $5 to domestic and foreign producers.

But if the world price stayed at $15 and the United States slapped on a $5 oil-import fee, domestic producers would still get their $20 (the prevailmg U.S. price). Foreign producers, however, would get only $15 (the world price). The U.S. Treasnry would pocket the other $5. That's $10 billion a year that could be put to any use: shrinking the deficit, funding day-care, bailing out Texas banks. Raising the world price — donating the $10 billion windfall to the Iranident Bush traveled to Saudi Arabia, an, Libyan and Saudi treasuries -

The time to kick a cartel is when it's down. The price of oil is sagging. But the long-term trends are not favorable to the West Demand is picking up. Exploration has declined. Ecological concerns are holding up the develop-ment of new fields such as those of North Slope Alaska and offshore Califormia. In the long run, the world price is bound to rise. And if super-OPEC comes to be, it may explode.

There is an oil shock awaiting us in the 1990s. The easiest way to avoid it is to reduce consumption by means of an oil import fee (or a gasoline tax). Unfortunately, the U.S. Congress does not have the courage to enact it and the president does not have the sense to propose it. Washington has drugs and "decline" and elections on the brain. Not even the impending birth of super-OPEC can move it to an energy policy that is not only urgent and obvious, but easy.

Nice Words From Aquino Haven't Stayed the Killing By John G. Healey

Corazon Aquino, supported by gan implementing her promises to respect human rights. Within a month she released more than 500 political prisoners. She reinstated the right to habeas corpus. She repealed a presidential decree that allowed indefinite detention without charge or trial. A new constitution prohibits torture and detention based on "political behefs and aspirations," and does away with "secret detention places." The Aquino government abolished the death penalty and endorsed two key international instruments of human rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the United Nations Convention Against Torture. Guidelines on human rights became part of military training. But the country had inherited stag-gering economic problems and politi-

of Noberto Gallines, a Christian lay worker, by a paramilitary group in Negros Occidental. Or the gunning down, outside his home, of David Bueno, the only active human rights lawyer in Ilocos Norte. Unlawful killings by government forces and government-supported groups have become the most serious human rights problem in the country. Incidents of tordeclined from the Marcos days.

To be sure, many of these killings followed on the heels of violence by Communist guerrillas and other op-position forces. But if security forces are drawn into this cycle of killings and reprisals, they relinquish their role as the guardian of law and order and the protector of the people.

"There are many ways to run a country, but there is only one way to treat people — with decency and respect," Mrs. Aquino said not long after taking office. But the words have fallen limp. The government seems unwilling or unable to persuade its security forces and government-supported vigilantes to end rights abuses. As of January, not a single military or police officer had been convicted and sentenced for political killings --- or for any other rights offense.

A reaffirmation and demonstra-tion of the Aquino government's commitment to human rights is urgently needed. The dream that accompanied the "ideal" revolution cannot be allowed to die.

Gorbachev is in fact res to what happened in Poland. Adam Michnik, a semor theoretician for Solidarity, told me a few months ago in Gdansk "Gorbachev defends the system by trying to introduce change from within, rather than waiting for disaster to force change. He is a comterreformist, understanding that there is a general crisis in communism, not simply a Polish crisis."

This picture of Mr. Gorbachevas leader chasing change rather than pushing it also appears in a proposi-tive article by S. Frederick Start in the spring issue of Foreign Policy magazine. He paints Mr. Gorbacher as "a conservative reformer trying to save a system facing pressures be

Regime Criteria Sent to Guerrillas

To Najib

U.S. Asks

A Rival

By Robert Pear WASHINGTON - The United States has told the Afghan guerrillas that it will support them in an effort to form a provisional govern-ment if they consolidate their control of most of the country and meet other criteria, according to State Department officials.

An aide to Michael H. Armacost, indersecretary of state for political affairs, delivered that message to guerrilla leaders in Peshawar, Pakistan, last week,

A State Department official said Thursday in an interview: "We don't accept the legitimacy of the Kabul regime. We assume that the withdrawal of Soviet forces will inevitably lead to a change of government because all the evidence we see suggests that it's the Russian presence that keeps the current government in power."

Under agreements signed April 14 in Geneva, the Soviet Union is supposed to start withdrawing its troops from Alghanistan by May 15. All the troops, estimated by the United States to number 115,000, are to be out within nine months. "A key objective of U.S. policy is to see that the Russians' withdrawal plan is implemented scrupulously and completely and, if possible, well ahead of schedule," the State Department official said. He said the Kremlin had many incentives to speed up the withdrawai.

"It's dangerous once you start withdrawing troops," said the official, who has a comprehensive view of U.S. policy toward Afghanistan. "The smaller the residual force, the more danger. So once it begins, I think there is a fair chance they will get out in six instead of nine months."

"I would think that by mid-summer, essentially everything except Kabul is likely to be in the hands of the resistance," the official said. "It is practically that way now."

Listing the criteria for U.S. support, he said Washington would welcome "a provisional government that controls territory and establishes a civil administration, possesses the capacity to assume the international obligations of Afghanistan, enjoys broad support and possesses the attributes of elfective government."

If the guerrillas were to form a provisional government with those attributes, as a rival to the Sovietbacked government in Kabul, they would have earned recognition from the international community, the official said.

He said Mr. Armacost's special adviser on Afghanistan, Zalmay Khalilzad, an Afghan-born American citizen, had traveled to Pakistan to re ers "that we continue to support their cause, and that we regard the Geneva agreements as a means of To get out promptly."

U.S. officials agreed on the crite-ria after the Alghan insurgents pressed the officials to say whether the United States would recognize provisional government formed by the guerrillas. The criteria, conveyed to the guerrillas by Mr. Khalilzad, are designed to encourage the insurgents to "remain unified until they supplant the illegitimate government in Kabul," the top official said.

U.S. officials said they assumed that if the guerrillas established a provisional government, it would be outside Kabul, the stronghold of Major General Najib, the Sovietbacked Afghan leader. Reports from Pakistan say the guerrilla leaders there have sent teams to the Afghan provinces of Paktia, Logar and Kunar to evaluate possible sites for a provisional government.

Selig S. Harrison, a senior associate of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, sounded a note of caution, saying support for a provisional government was a high-risk strategy that could in-volve the United States in a prolonged civil war on the side of isamie fundamentalist elements.

GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED LOTTERY Lono 6/49 is an official loctery operated by the ten Provincial Governments of Canada. It's called Lotto 6/49 because six winning numbers from a total of forty-nine are selected each draw. If the six numbers chosen match the six numbers you are playing, you win the jackpot. In addition to the six regular winning numbers chosen, there's one additional number drawn called the bonus number. If you have any five of the six regular winning numbers correct plus the bonus number, you win second prize. Any five, four, or three of the regular winning numbers correct wins you third, fourth, or fifth prize respectively.

There's a new draw twice each week Ion Wednesday and Saturday), every week of the year. The jackpot is guaranteed to be not less than $1 Million dollars in each draw. And if the jackpox is not won in the current draw, that prize money is carried over and added to the jackpot for the next draw, growing until it's won!

YOU PICK YOUR OWN NUMBERS Besides the enormous prizes to be won, the best thing about Lotto 6/49 is that you pick your own numbers. So, instead of just buying a ticket, you really do play this lottery. Many people feel they have certain personal lucky numbers or numbers that have a special significance to them, such as birthdays or anniversaries, Still others look for statistical patterns in the numbers selected. But whatever method you use, you'll find it much more exciting to play the lottery that lets you enter your own numbers.

from the plant were "normal for vacation time" and that production at the huge mill was slowly resuming.
In Warsaw, the government moved toward more forceful action to stop the crisis as an advisory committee of the Sejm, or partiament, reviewed a draft law granting the council of ministers "special powers" to stop protests, suppress inflation and enforce reforms. General Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, first proposed the measure in March, before the outbreak of the strikes.

According to a copy of the draft law obtained by Western news agencies in Warsaw, the measure would empower Deputy Prime Minister Zdzislaw Sadowski, the architect of General Jaruzeiski's six-month-old economic program, to freeze wages and prices, impose taxes, lay off workers, dismiss managers of state enterprises and liquidate unprofitable companies.

The law would also suspend the labor code of 1982 for the rest of the year, preventing official trade unions from carrying out disputes with management over wages or striking. All other protests are banned, and violaters could be subject to one-year prison terms, according to the draft. The policy plan immediately drew strong criticism from Alfred Miodowicz, a Politburo member who heads the official trade unions. He said it was "a scrious blow" to General Jaruzelski's "process of democratization" and added that "trade unions stripped of their legai rights will not be able to bear responsibility for reforming the economy." The statement by Mr. Miodowicz, which followed a press conference Thursday in which he also strongly criticized the govern-ment, underlined what appear to be increasing divisions among high Communist and government lead-ers. Mr. Sadowski, who is not a party member and who is due to exercise the special powers, also said publicly several weeks ago that he felt they were not needed.

One leading Communist figure, Stanislaw Ciosek, a member of the Politburo, has been described by church and opposition sources as a seeming advocate of compromise during the recent strike wave. Mr. Ciosek encouraged the mediation efforts of the church and encouraged Władysław Sila-Nowicki, a pro-Solidarity lawyer and member of a special "consultative council" advising General Jaruzelski, 10 undertake his own compromise effort, opposition sources said. Mr. Sila-Nowicki entered the Lenin Shipyard for the second day Friday, apparently enjoying an of-ficial dispensation allowing him to cross police lines. However, Solidarity leaders in the shippard said his talks with Mr. Walesa had not helped resolve the conflict. Even as the lawyer and church delegates were beginning work Wednesday night, security forces under the command of the interior minister, General Czeslaw Kiszczak, were preparing for the crackdown. That fact has caused some church and Solidarity figures to ac-cuse the government of deliberate duplicity and others to speculate that a serious struggle over policy is under way between the hard-line generals and moderates favoring a compromise. As the noose of police pressure seemed to tighten around the Lenin Shipyard on Friday, Solidarity leaders inside expressed hopes that the sharp reaction of the church and Western governments to the crackdown in Nowa Huta still might cause the authorities to hesi-

The Savage Richness of Gauguin

By Paul Richard Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — "The Art of Paul Gauguin" at the National Gallery of Art is scholarly, definitive, enigmatic, vast.

The 240 glowing paintings, moody prints and drawings, carvings and ceramics, have come to Washington from Cairo, Lenin-grad, Jerusalem, São Paulo, Tokyo, south Australia and Tahiti. No painter traveled farther. His voyage has no equal in the history of art. His pink sands and his scarlet seas changed our dreams of paradise. The orchestrated, sun-bright colors he ignited helped drive the semi-scientific art of the Impressionists toward the glories of Matisse. Sultry, silent women linger in the warmth of his green and purple shadows. Gauguin's embracing sensuality, his savagery and selfish-ness, his courage and his vanity, just as he intended, changed our understanding of the license al-lowed genius. He manipulated everyone: van Gogh, Degas, Pissarro Vincent's brother Theo, and postenity as well.

"Be mysterious" was his motto. He gave his South Seas paintings titles in Tahitian. His strange religious pictures blend Christian with pagan, present with past.

In 1889, using crimson and come to us in chapters ("Matisse in chrome yellow, he portrayed his Nice," "Van Gogh in Arles"). It is beak-nosed visage on an oaken easy to see why. NYSE Lower in Dull Trading

United Press International said. "Right now the market is looking for a new NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange closed lower Friday for the third straight session in slow trading, as investigations of the could continue with this slow erosion."

Broad-market indexes also extended their third straight session in slow trading, as inves-tors remained cautious despite a U.S. economic report that gave the market some cheery news. The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost index fell 1.31 to 257 to close at 2.007.46. For the week, the Dow lost 24.87 points or 1.2 percent.

Declines led advances by nearly 2 to 1, as olume slid to 129.61 million shares from 171.84 million traded Thursday.

"The story has to be the across-the-board malaise in all of the financial markets," said Dennis Jarrett, a technical analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co. "Downside pressure, even a small amount, allows for slow erosion. Prices will fall simply under their own weight."

The market showed some life in the early going after the government said the U.S. civilian memployment rate fell to 5.4 percent in April, the lowest level since June 1974 and down from 5.6 percent in March.

The report said nonfarm employment rose by only 174,000 in April, far below market forecasts of about 265,000. The March increase was revised to 296,000.

Wall Street had feared that a surge in nonfarm jobs would only confirm fears that a strong economy might produce higher inflation and interest rates.

Markets See No Quick Cure Demand For the U.S. Trade Deficit

By LEONARD SILK

EW YORK — It is becoming harder and harder to distinguish good news from bad news. Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said this week that he was "optimistic that the balance of trade will continue to improve in 1988 and beyond." That sounded

But Mr. Greenspan hastened to add that the faster the trade balance improves, "the greater the burden on monetary policy to curtail private domestic spending," lest the rapidly improving trade balance, combined with strong domestic spending, acceler-

Did that imply Mr. Greenspan would raise interest rates to slow down the economy? When he was asked, Mr. Greenspan appeared to be saying no, or at least warding off speculation that the Fed would soon raise rates.

Exports are careful operator, with the patience to do nothing until he can clearly read the writing on the wall. His apparent conclusion is that he does not yet know whether the domestic economy is overstrained and whether he needs to take more forceful action against inflation.

was it good news that he was not ready to tighten up and raise rates? Or was it bad news that the Fed was unwilling to head off inflation now? With unemployment coming down and many factories already operating close to capacity, inflation loomed. Further, companies operating close to capacity would be unable to expand their exports, especially in the face of growing domestic demand. Good news on the profits front, but bad news if it meant greater inflationary pressure that would eventually have to be followed by a more aggressive monetary policy later. If the Fed continued to delay tightening, perhaps until after the presidential election, would the trade balance really improve? The danger would be that excess demand and inflation would cause the trade deficit to worsen. And that, in turn, would zap the dollar, and drive down the securities markets.

HE MARKETS seem to think that there cannot be an easy remedy for the trade deficit. If a bigger share of U.S. production is to be shipped abroad, domestic consumption and investment will have to shrink or at least grow at a slower rate. It is highly unlikely that the acceleration of exports can come through fast enough to offset the effect on gross national product - the total output of goods and services - of curbed domestic demand.

A worsening trade deficit would create another danger: that protectionist pressures would intensify and go out of control after Anti-protectionist forces in the administration, centered in the U.S. State Department, say they hope there will be no trade legislation this year. John C. Whitehead, the deputy secretary of state, said in an interview Thursday that he expected the trade bill to reach President Ronald Reagan in about its existing form.

"I think the president will veto it," Mr. Whitehead said. "His veto message will refer to the 60-day advance notice on plant closings, and we hope it will also refer to other provisions of which we disapprove."

Even if such provisions were eliminated, the anti-protectionists say they hope the president will veto the trade bill. Its most serious fault is in its overall approach to trade policy, they say. Richard Billmire, a Washington economist, observes in an article written for Polynomics Inc., an economic consulting concern, that the trade bill would "make it infinitely easier for an alleged victim of unfair trade practices to spur a government interven-tion, to obtain a positive finding that unfairness exists and to

IEA Lifts Forecast

Stability in Price Of Oil Foreseen

PARIS - The International Energy Agency, which monitors pe-troleum supply and demand for the industrialized countries, is predicting slightly stronger world demand for oil this year.

The IEA Monthly Oil Market Report for May shows the agency has raised its estimate for non-Communist world oil demand as a whole by 300,000 barrels daily, to 49.5 million barrels, since its last report in early April.

In the final three months of the year, it believes demand might go to 50.8 million barrels, up 600,000 on earlier forecasts.

IEA officials said the new estimates follow predictions that economic growth in the 24 industrial nations of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Devel-opment will be around 3 percent. up from 2.5 percent earlier.

The stronger demand supports a assessment among Western oil ex-ecutives that, despite current surpluses in the market, prices will probably not drop sharply.

Experts in London say the price crude oil, around $16 a barrel now for widely traded North Sea blends, could slip by a dollar or two in coming months before erasing the losses and perhaps edging a little high by year-end.

The IEA does not detail demand for oil produced by the Organiza-tion of Petroleum Exporting Countries or from stocks but its figures suggested demand will rise from 17.4 million barrels daily in the current quarter to more than 20 million in the final three months of

It put OPEC crude oil output in April at 18.2 million barrels a day, up from 17.7 million in March.

The IEA said the OECD nations used 36.9 million barrels of oil a day in the first quarter of 1988.

This would be 600,000 barrels or .7 percent higher than in the same 1987 period and further evidence of a slow recovery in demand for oil.

The IEA said most of the growth in demand was in North America where consumption mainly because of heating oil use rose about 900,000 barrels daily or 5 percent, to 18.9 million barrels a day from Leonard Lauder, top right, with two Estée Lander executives. The cosmetic house's new model, Paulina Porizkova, is a major element in the campaign to bring new life to Lander's image.

Make-Over Time at Estée Lauder Cosmetics House Embarks on Image Rejuvenation

By Anne-Marie Schiro

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Estée Lauder called her son Leonard recently and told him he had to start coloring his hair. She had seen him on television that morning talking about the company's new perfume, Knowing, and decided that his gray hair made her seem old.

Mr. Lauder, the 55-year-old president and chief executive officer of Estee Lauder Inc., laughed when he recalled the incident.

But it is more than an amusing anecdote. It represents new thinking at the venerable cosmetic house, which recently has embarked on a major rejuvenation of its image. It eventually will wash the gray out of its advertising, its packaging, its store counters and even the uniforms worn by its sales staff. The changes will affect only the Estee Lauder brand, not the company's Clinique, Pre-scriptives or Aramis lines.

"When companies are able to change, they can stay young, fresh and vital and continually renew themselves," Mr. Lauder said. "At a meeting just before Christmas, I told my people, I want to reinvent Estée Lauder.' '

People in the beauty industry agree that the company had an older image and could use shak-

The first step was hiring Paulina Porizkova, a model with sensuous, woman-of-the-world beauty, to replace the virginal-looking Willow Bay in Lauder advertising. The campaign began in April with the first advertisement for Knowing.

Victor Skrebneski, who has photographed Lauder's ads for 25 years, is doing the new ads principally in black and white.

Estée Lander is the largest U.S. prestige brand of cosmetics sold in department stores, controlling about 38 percent of the market. Although it is a private company and does not reveal figures, its sales are estimated to total $780 million in the United States and more than $1 billion worldwide. The $23 billion world market in cosmetics and fragrances is currently volatile, with large companies buying up other smaller ones and aggressively seeking a greater share of the pic.

Avon recently bought Giorgio and Parfums Stern, which markets the Oscar de la Renta, Perry Ellis and Valentino brands. Revlon, which in the 1960s and '70s was Lauder's major competitor, has re-entered the fray since Ronald Perelman took over, buying Charles of the Ritz and other companies, and starting a major advertising campaign

Texas Air Files $1.5 Billion Suit Against Unions

MIAMI — Texas Air Corp. and its Eastern Airlines subsidiary said Friday that they had filed a $1.5 billion suit against two airline unions, charging them with an illegal attempt to destroy and take over Eastern.

The complaint charges the Air Line Pilots Association, the Inter-national Association of Machinists and the local leaders of both unions with racketeering, extortion, fraud and defamation in an attempt to destroy Eastern, according to Eastern officials.

The suit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court here. The airline is requesting a jury trial.

The suit contends that the nions conducted a public "smearing" of Eastern's reputation, staged illegal work slowdowns and tried to undermine worker loyalty, Eastern said in a statement.

A spokeswoman for the airline declined further comment.

Charles Bryant, the local president of the machinists' union who was named in the suit, could not be reached for comment, But the pilots' union said the suit was an attempt by Texas Air to shield itself from negative publicity.

"I think what we're seeing is a desperate attempt to draw attention away from Texas Air's and Eastern's growing problems," said Captain Henry Duffy, president of the union. "It is a frivolous lawsuit, top to bottom.

Eastern and Texas Air both are under investigation by the U.S. 20vernment.

The Eastern-Texas Air complaint states that the unions were attempting to obtain ownership and control of Eastern through an extortionate scheme."

Named in the suit were the pilots association and its Eastern Master Executive Council, the machinists' union and local branch, and union leaders at the airline, including Mr. Bryant and John J. Bavis Jr. of the pilots' association.

Eastern, whose losses of about $900 million in the past 10 years include a $181.6 million loss last year, was acquired by Texas Air in 1986 for $676 million. The unions had tried to halt the sale of the Miami-based carrier, making their own offer for Eastern. Since the sale, relations between came after months of lobbying by the airline and its unions have been Eastern's unions. (Reuters, AP)

The 1987 first-quarter results were restated to include the results of People Express, New York Air and Rocky Mountain Airways, which Continental purchased from Texas Air in Аргіі 1987.

At Eastern, aggressive cost control and the elimination of noneconomic services helped reduce losses from the level incurred in the last half of 1987, the company said.

The number of brokerages in Taiwan is currently limited to 28, some owned privately and others ed to participation in locally managed domestic funds and closed-end funds for overseas investors listed in New York and London. The spokesman said foreign involvement in the securities industry would help improve standards. But he ruled out allowing direct foreign investment in the local market since Taiwan, flooded with export carnings, did not need the money. He said the government would start accepting applications for new brokerages from May 19. More than 10 foreign brokerage houses have expressed an interest in entering into joint ventures in Taiwan, and analysts said the total number of brokerages could rise to 70 by the end of the year. He said the government would assess the performance of joint ventures before deciding on whether to allow foreigners to wholly own local brokerages. New brokerages could have one branch office outside Taipei a year after they begin, he added.

The move is expected to trigger a rush of companies into the field to take advantage of a surge in stock trading volume that brokers said on some days has totaled more than the rest of Southeast Asia combined.

The Taipei stock market is now booming after crashing in October.

OSLO - Promising a tight budget for the coming year, Norway's finance minister, Gunnar Berge, said Friday that the country's economy was improving despite high interest rates and growing worries over inflation.

"There will be a tight budget next year," Mr. Berge said at a news conference, "but we are moving in the right direction to correct our economic imbalances." In a revised 1988 budget published Friday, the minority Labor government said it expected a budget surplus of 4.1 billion kroner ($670 million) this year and growth of 0.5 percent in the country's gross national product.

The government previously projected GNP growth of 1 percent. Last year the GNP, the sum of a country's goods and services, rose by 0.9 percent.

Mr. Berge said the upward revision of the budget surplus, from the previously expected 2.2 billion kroner, was a result of a wage agreement reached with Norway's major agement company based in Geneva, will hold the majority.

Unigestion's current stake represents 31.7 percent of BSI's voting shares. The entire Park Tower stake holds voting rights.

The statement said Tito Tettamanti, the financier, had sold an option on 88,685 registered shares and 13,191 bearer shares in BSI that he "owns or represents" to Park Tower. That represents a 19.7 percent share in BSI voting shares.

Terms were not disclosed, and neither Uni-gestion nor Mr. Tettamanti could be reached for comment.

BSI management agreed to the move, the statement said, but the bank had no comment.

Last week, Unigestion bought its stake in the Swiss bank from Irving Bank Corp. for $390 million. It said it had intended to acquire the majority of BSI's voting stock.

The fact that Unigestion is Swiss was believed to play an important role in helping it increase the stake in BSI despite competition from major international banks.

Taiwan's Trade Surplus Grows to $730 Million

Agence France-Presse TAIPEI — Taiwan's monthly trade surplus grew to $730 million in April from $162 million in March, the Directorate General of Budget, Accounting and Statistics said Friday.

It was the first increase in the monthly sur-plus since the record high of $2.23 billion in plus since the record high of $2.23 billion in September.

The April gap, however, was 54 percent lower than the $1.59 billion surplus registered in the same month last year, reflecting continued progress in trimming the country's chronic trade imbalance, the state-run agency said.

Exports last month grew 10 percent, to $4.83 billion, compared with April 1987, when the lowest annual rate since January 1987 was recorded the agency said Imports jumped 45.5

corded, the agency said. Imports jumped 45.5 percent to $4.10 billion. percent to $4.10 billion.

For the first four months of 1988, Taiwan's export and import trade totaled $35 billion, accounting for a surplus of $2.06 billion. Exports in that period totaled $18.56 billion, an increase of 18.6 percent from the same period last year, while imports were up 67 percent to $16.50 billion.

Ship Orders Up 15% in Europe

PARIS - New orders at West European shipyards rose 15 per-cent in 1987, the Organization for Economic Development and Cooperation has reported.

The organization said Thursday that the yards won orders for 2.77 million compensated gross tons. It said the increase reflected good de-mand for luxury cruise ships, as well as for tankers. Finnish orders more than tripled to 708,000 CGT and French orders jumped 36 percent to 144,000 CGT. The two were the main beneficiaries of the surge in demand for cruise ships, the OECD said.

NEW YORK - Western Publishing Group Inc., the largest U.S. publisher of children's books, has said that it is holding merger talks with Gulf & Western Inc., the entertainment, publishing and financial services company.

According to sources familiar with the talks, a deal, if it takes place, would be in the range of $450 million to $500 million, or about $22.50 to $25 a share for Western's 20 million shares outstanding. Gulf & Western acknowledged Thurs-& Western acknowledged day that preliminary talks were going on, but said there was no assurance of a deal.

Western said there were unresolved tax issues arising from the proposed combination. It also said its board was willing to pursue merger talks with other parties.

Western Publishing's stock, which has been active recently on takeover speculation, were quoted late Friday at $22,125 in over-thecounter trading, down $1.125 on heavy volume. An industry analyst, who asked not to be identified, said that a price of $23 a share or more seemed fair. Gulf & Western shares lost 25 cents, to $37.625, on the New York Stock Exchange.

المكذا عن الإصل Hughes Aircraft Chairman, Wheelon, Retires Abruptly

By Ralph Vartabedian Los Angeles Times Service LOS ANGELES — Hughes Air-

crast Co.'s chairman, Albert D. Wheelon, abruptly retired Thursday, citing personal reasons.

Mr. Wheelon's retirement from Hughes, a General Motors Corp. subsidiary, came at a hastily called meeting of Hughes directors at GM headquarters in Detroit.

The retirement came amid what sources describe as an internal investigation of certain business practices involving the sale of Hughes communications satellites. The investigation began last year.

The Hughes board elected Maicolm R. Currie, 61, as the new chairman. Mr. Currie had been president and chief executive at General Motors' Delco Electronics

A company statement said Mr. Wheelon "is retiring for personal reasons, pursuant to the provisions of the Hughes Aircraft Co. retire-

Mr. Wheelon, 59, is six years shy of normal retirement age at Hughes and only a year into his tenure as chief executive. He had worked at Hughes since 1966 and became chief executive in April 1987.

Mr. Wheelon declined comment. Hughes's president, Donald H. White, declined to say whether Mr.

Wheelon retired at the request of the board or on his own volition. The internal investigation, sources said, is looking into business practices at Hughes Space & Communications Group, the unit that controls half the worldwide communications satellite market. Mr. Wheelon was the group's president for 15 years until becoming executive vice president of Hughes Aircraft in 1986. According to sources, the investigation focuses on the sale of Hughes satellites to Intelsat, an organization that provides international telephone service. The investigation is said to be examining whether improper payments were made to Intelsat or its officials in connection with contracts Hughes over a long period of time.

Intelsat has been the subject of controversy in the past. Richard Colino, former Intelsat director general and chief executive, was dismissed in late 1986 and later pleaded guilty to a scheme to obtain $4.8 million through the rigging of construction and financing contracts for Intelsat's new headquarters in Washington. Intelsat's deputy director, Jose L. Alegrett, also was dismissed but was not charged. There is no indication that the internal Hughes investigation is connected to the conspiracy charges that resulted in Mr. Co-lino's guilty plea.

Mr. Currie joined Hughes in 1954 as a member of the technical staff of Hughes Research Laboratories, where he pioneered research in lasers and traveling-wave tubes. He left Hughes in 1969 to join Beckman Instruments as vice president of research and development and corporate planning. In 1973, he became undersecretary of defense for research and engineering. Mr. Currie rejoined Hughes in 1977 as vice president and group executive of the Missile Systems Group and was named executive vice president of Hughes six years later. He became chief of Delco Electronics in February 1986.

More Lost Jobs

LONDON - The curbacks in the British securities indus-try that began after October's stock market collapse will continue, Sir Nicholas Goodison, the chairman of the London

Stock Exchange, said Friday. "Too many banks and too many people rushed in when the market was booming, making cutbacks inevitable in the wake of the crash." Sir Nicholas said in a speech to the American Chamber of Commerce in London.

Market sources estimate that up to 2,000 people in London's financial services industry have lost their jobs since the Oct. 19 market collapse. Sir Nicholas said that shares rose too high before the collapse, making the extent of the setback "almost necessary."

PARIS — After recovering only slightly, the French franc and Italian lira remained under pressure Friday in nervous currency trading ahead of Sunday's final presidential vote in France. Dealers cited concern that a realignment of the European Mone-tary System's exchange rate mechanism could follow the French election, and would lower the value of these two currencies. For months the lira has been the weakest member of the eight-nation currency float.

Other economists, however, said the wage gains were not big enough to trigger a tightening of credit by the Federal Reserve Board through higher interest rates in an effort to cool off the economy.

"The fears of an inflationary boom are overstated," said Larry Chimerine, president of the WEFA Group of Bala Cynwyd, Pennsylvania, an economic consulting firm. "I don't think it will get out of hand. Manufacturing is strong, but other areas of the economy such as of the economy as opposed to the

NEW YORK (NYT) — Michael Fay of New Zealand asked the New York state Supreme Court on Thursday to rule on the San Diego Yacht Club's plan to defend the America's Cup with a multihull. A hearing is scheduled May 18 before Judge Carmen Beauchamp Ciparick.
Fay, who took the action through the Mercury Bay Boating Club of New Zealand, which represents him in his challenge for the America's Cup, said from New Zealand that he wanted a "fair and equal" match. He contends that the cup's Deed of Gift, which is administered by the New York court, calls for a series between "two like and similar boats." Sail America, the defense syndicate, maintains that there is no wording in the deed of gift to ban multihulls from cup racing Fay insists that the challenger has the right to decide the type of boat each side will sail. Stuns Red Wings as Oilers Rally, 5-3 The Red Wings had learned be-

By Charles Trueheart

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — Some writers choose their isolation. Carlos Fuentes doesn't think he has that option. Certainly he doesn't have the temperament. He illustrates the point with a remark he says John Updike once made, explaining how the world manifested itself, in letters and magazines and newspapers, through the little blue mailbox at the end of his driveway. "In Latin America," Fuentes announces with his customary vigor and a pantomimed explosion of his up-turned fingers, "in our little mailboxes, there's a bomb every day."

Fuentes, who will turn 60 in November, floats on the wings of an international reputation he has earned and nurtured over the years as a novelist, dramatist, professor, pamphleteer and diplomat. Today he is an elder without portfolio, and a citizen less of any country than of conferences and campuses. "I've learned to write anywhere - in a motel, in a plane, on a bus," he says. "I give myself no excuses for not writing.

Being itinerant is the price he pays to be cosmopolitan. But Mexico, his homeland, remains his literary subject, and the political struggle of the hemisphere his vocation. By plumbing the history and culture he shares with Latin Americans everywhere, Fuentes has become a tribune of sorts - a latter-day Rubén Dario, the revered turn-of-the-century Nicaraguan nationalist poet. The veneration of intellectuals is not unusual out-side the United States. "In most Latin American countries, the heroes traditionally have been literary people," says the U.S. novelist William Styron, an old friend of Fuentes and his companion on a much-publicized January visit to the front lines of revolutionary Nicaragua. For this reason, remarked the Peruvian novelist Mario Vargas Llosa not long ago, "writers are considered dangerous, because they are dangerous. They have the way to mobilize public opinion."

Even before the fall of Anastasio Somoza, Fuentes had been a friendly patron of the revolution, and his sustained support for the cause recently garnered him a coveted Nicaraguan literary prize named for Dario and given before to the likes of Graham Greene and Gabriel Garcia Marquez. The defense of Nicaragna is the defense of all Latin America," Fuentes said at the award ceremonies in Managua, against "the hegemonic power in

As it happens, that hegemonic power is where he hangs his hat much of the time. For Fuentes, Harvard, where he has taught for several recent semesters, is "my stable, and it will continue to be so."

But these days — January through May, anyway — Fuentes is living in Washing-ton to fulfill the one-day-a-week obligations of his $50,000 academic appointment at the upwardly mobile George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

During the course of a recent afternoon there, Fuentes talked about his writing and his politics as he moved hastily from one corner of the campus to another: an undecorated office, a library seminar room, a faculty refectory, a

Today he is a citizen less of any country than of conferences and campuses. T've learned to write anywhere in a motel, in a plane, on a bus,' he says.

bench in the quadrangle, a lecture hall. The restlessness is macro as well as micro. Last week Fuentes returned from a week in Madrid with his second wife, the Mexican television newswoman Sylvia Lemus, and their two teen-age children. There the king of Spain bestowed upon the author another important literary award, the Cervantes Prize, named for the author of what Fuentes, and many others, believe to have been the very first novel. On June 1, he reports to Berlin for rehearsals of one of his plays.
His longtime U.S. publisher, Farrar

Straus & Giroux, has just brought out a book of essays called "Myself With Others." This fall, a collection titled "Constancia and Other Stories for Virgins" will appear. And next spring, if the trans-lation is on schedule, Farrar Straus & Giroux will issue his long-awaited chef d'oeuvre, "Christopher Unborn."

The novel tells the story, the author explains in an office that shows no imprint of his residence, of a child conceived by a young Mexican couple intent on winning a national contest to produce a child on Columbus Day 1992, the 500th anniversary of the signal hemispheric event. Like "Tristram Shandy" in its day and the Chilean novelist Ariel Dorfman's "The Last Song of Manuel Sendero" in ours, "Christopher Unborn" is narrated by the conceived one, who listens and watches, possessed of supernatural perceptions and ageless wisdom, from inside his mother's womb.

For readers of Fuentes's novels - the most famous is "The Death of Artemio Cruz" (1962); the most "serious" is "Terra Nostra" (1975); the most accessible is "The Hydra Head" (1978); the most recent is "The Old Gringo" (1985) - the narrative point of view of "Christopher Unboru" will seem almost ho-hum. In "The Death of Artemio Cruz," for instance, the story is told alternately by a detached narrator, the dying man and his

Though he is a best-selling author in Mexico and a better-selling author elsewhere than most serious novelists have any hope to be, Fuentes speaks with something like envy of writers who are 'successful on both levels," the commercial and the literary. The two he names, Dickens and Balzac, "didn't have to compete with television and movies and information, a barrage of things demand-ing your attention" — what he calls, felicitously, "other claims on language."

Fuentes faults North Americans for being disconnected from their past, for what amounts to a profound failure of memory. "The United States is an amnesiac country," Fuentes says. "You forget an essential fact of the Founding Fathers: that you were revolutionaries. So that when another American country builds its revolution, 'Hey! What are they doing? What is this? Well, these are the things revolutions do, and your revolu-

Because of his revolutionary sympathies, Fuentes in the past has been denied entry to the United States and over the years has been hassled by U.S. authorities. Besides his fiction - and plays and films and critical essays—he has written political tracts, including an impassioned report on the events of May 1968 in Paris. and countless articles on the passing international scene.

For the Latin American writer, such engagement is second nature. "Many of the novels of the Mexican Revolution." he says, "were written on horseback by followers of Pancho Villa." So how does he account for the relative quiescence, politically, of his fellow writers north of the border?

"In this country," he answers pleasantly, "the writer has the sense that these matters are taken care of, well taken care of, by the strength and diversity of the political and social institutions, by the press, by the Congress, by the unions." He doesn't sound as if he believes they are wrong to feel this way - but does this mean Fuentes begrudges U.S. writers the luxury of their isolation and ease?

He sips his orange juice thoughtfully. "I'm not begrudging anybody," he But I think nevertheless that a mo-
